

Education and Culture DG

Lifelong Learning Programme

Cultural Learning for Families

A European Learning Partnership funded through GRUNDTVIG

The partnership

Today, many cultural institutions in Europe offer cultural education programs for children and young people. However, there is a crucial point where youth- or children-focused programs often meet their constraints: The family level of cultural participation is a very influential factor when it comes to accessing and sustainably using learning opportunities in cultural, artistic or creative environments.

Cultural institutions are therefore challenged to develop programs and offers to provide family learning experiences and specifically find ways to reach out to disadvantaged families.

Aims & objectives

To learn more about existing approaches to family learning in cultural, artistic and creative education settings, the learning partnership wants to

- share good practices
- discuss the qualities of existing practices
- compare the socio-political background and infrastructures in the participating countries.

The joint learning process is continually documented and will be summarised in a good practice catalogue, providing recommendations on the level of policy and practice developed by the partners.

The partners

The partners from Austria, Germany, Slovenia and Spain bring together different experiences from cultural education practice, management, research, consultancy and networking.

EDUCULT
Vienna, Austria
www.educult.at

interarts
Barcelona, Spain
www.interarts.net

BKJ
Remscheid, Germany
www.bkj.de

ŠKUC
Ljubljana, Slovenia
www.skuc.org

How you can get involved

Are you interested in learning more about the partnership? Do you want to share your experiences with us? Then get in touch with one of the partners or contact the coordinator at EDUCULT (anke.schad@educult.at).